BEFORE YOU HIRE ANYONE

5 things you should own before you pay for a website.

If you can't take it with you, you don't own it.

01

Your domain name.

It should be registered in your name, on your account. If it's in your web company's name, so is your address on the internet.

02

Owner access to your Google profile.

You should be the Owner. Whoever helps you should be a Manager you can remove any time. Not the other way around.

03

Your words and photos.

Your job photos and service descriptions belong to you, not the company that put them on the page. Get that in writing.

04

Your site, if you leave.

Ask what happens the day you cancel. The right answer: you keep your site. The wrong answer is a long pause.

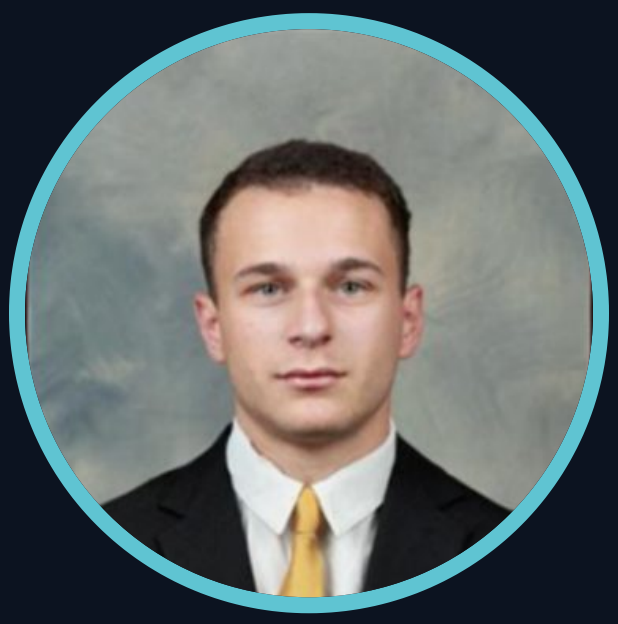

05

The right to leave.

A 12 month contract means you can't fire someone who isn't getting results. Month to month keeps everyone honest.

If you can't leave, you're not a client.

Ask these five questions before you sign anything.
