LOCAL SEO, HONESTLY

How long until my new site shows up on Google?

Usually 6 to 8 weeks. Here's what Google is doing the whole time.

01

Google has to find it.

A new site starts out invisible. Google has to discover it and read every page before you can show up for anything.

02

Then it checks your facts.

Same name, phone number and service area on your site and your Google profile. When they match, Google is more sure who you are.

03

Every page is a new door.

A page for each service and each town you work in gives Google more searches to match you with. One page is one door.

04

Reviews keep it moving.

Fresh reviews tell Google you're open and busy right now. A steady flow beats a big burst once a year.

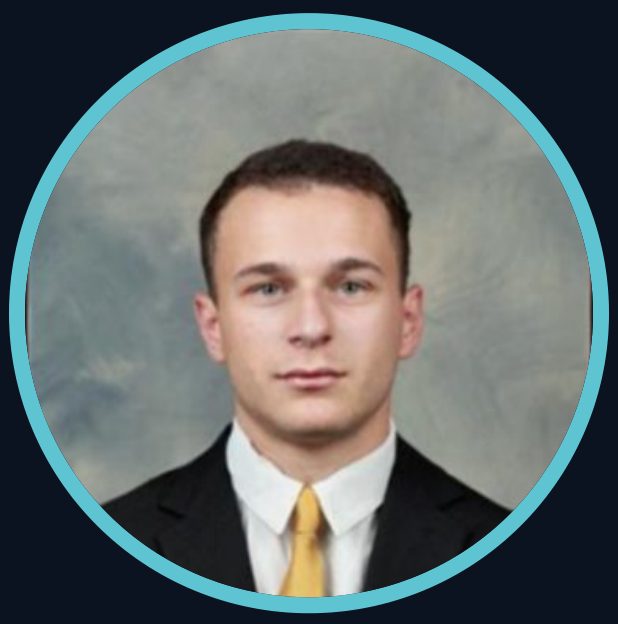

05

SEO Premier speeds it up.

A managed Google profile, every review answered and a new Google post each week. Typically 4 to 6 weeks instead of 6 to 8.

Most owners quit right before it works.

Give a new site two months before you judge it.
